Basically, Cicada 3301 is some kind of abstract organization that is apparently either incredibly rich or larger than they let on, due to a series of incidents that show up in multiple cities around the world. They held some "tests" back in 2011 and earlier than that where you basically had to run through the biggest gauntlet of cryptology and mathematics that /x/ has ever seen, and most had no clue what to do past a certain point. That was just the recruitment. Then there was this one guy that said they were some kind of cult using a Neitzsche-like philosophy, but that most likely isn't legit. Otherwise, not much else is known about them by the majority besides the fact that they are incredibly secretive and have a big bark.

It was an archive that measures forum activity. I scrolled down looking for one that matched with 10:59 and came up with this.

So going back to the whole 560,101 referring to paleontology and philosophy...

I think it might be Paleontology, footnote 101, or at least the information contained in between.

From the wiki:

This encouraged early evolutionary theories on the transmutation of species.[101] After Charles Darwin published Origin of Species in 1859, much of the focus of paleontology shifted to understanding evolutionary paths, including human evolution, and evolutionary theory.[101]

1. Faroese

4. The quote at the bottom of the page:

Oll menniskju eru fodd fræls og jovn til virðingar og mannarættindi. Tey hava skil og samvitsku og eiga at fara hvort um annað í bróðuranda.

which roughly translates to:

So admittedly this is a bit of conjecture, but bear with me.

<http://13h45h35.99k.org>

--> kgg.sehsahel

KGG is senegals airport code

Sahel is a strip of africa, a quick wiki search will show you. Senegal is part of this strip.

Coordinates 13.45, 35.99 is on the opposite side of the Sahel that Senegal is.

As for seh:

seh.com - SEH America Inc., located in Vancouver Washington, together with its parent company Shin-Etsu Handotai, Ltd, and affiliates in Europe, Malaysia and Taiwan combine to form the world's largest silicon wafer supplier. (The pacific northwest branches phone number 8837053 is prime, not including area code.)

The Shin-Etsu group is a worldwide corporation "the worlds leading supplier of 'key materials'"

<http://www.shinetsu.co.jp/en/>

Look further at this site and get a feel for how far reaching their network is. This is likely the point behind all of this.

sehinc.com - This company has limited overseas doings. Check it out:

<http://www.sehinc.com/news/company/in-sight-newsletter-article/2007/dec/15/sehs-expertise-extends-overseas> - probably irrelevant

seh is also the IATA airport code for - Senggeh Airport, Senggeh, Indonesia (borders Malaysia) -mostly irrelevant

You have to read yourself. The meme engineering idea seems to connect with the rest of the cicada stuff but not proven.

It's like all of this is a sort of meta game to breed ideas using darwinism. A self fulfilling prophecy to "create what you fear most" and making computers to engineer culture. "What you resist persists" means that even resisting or disputing furthers the process. The computer science stuff is just bait to get people involved who have the knowledge to try to attempt actual memetic engineering.

The redpilling mindfuck occurs when there's talk of the word meme itself being memetically engineered, and possible instances of this being implicitly done - was The Game actually a social experiment to test ideas about the transmission of viral-like ideas?

Fuck for all we know 4chan itself may have been designed to experiment with memes. how far does the metta-game go?
