The two trinity crosses represent inversions of the Orthodox cross and could be considered satanic/qliphothic

The bug with the long tendrils is a mayfly. The bug below it is the symbol of Cicada 3301.

The two loops represent the infinity symbol.

The tree likely represents Kabbalah/Qliphoth.

The cluster of dots is likely to represent either numbers or a star system. The cluster of strange writing to the right of those dots is Babylonian/Sumerian.

The two mayfly's forming a diamond likely has the same symbolic conurbations of the hexagram or "as above so below".

The spray effect may fly above the corpse possibly represents spirit and I would suggest it likely that these two are linked.

The wing with the three dots and the plants represented below it have no discernable meaning to me.

From the left:

Orthodox Cross and same, but horizontal below it (just turned round or fallen?)

Mayfly - often symbolize something ephemeral, short-lived.

Mayflies are also often used as a fishbait.

Cicada 3301 logo below Mayfly

Is it a tree? Looks kinda like a contrast picture of a dendrite to me.

Wing of an insect (Cicada's wing?)

Five dots: ηζγαβ (? not sure, probably I'm overthinking this)

Cuneiform. Akkadian? I wouldn't dare to transliterate tho

Mayfly made with spray effect. cool idea for a flashmob's logo

Two mayflies connected (mating?)

If 5 dots were ηζγαβ, those are ζ ε δ - Orions Belt

Weird ornaments. The first from the left looks like it was made of 2 others combined. The second one looks kinda floral the other one looks kinda like dendrites or veins?

Hmm maybe the tree-like shape represents a tree AND a dendrite at the same time?

Human body.

Since it's cicada you have to look at it in deeper terms. And more numerical terms. For instance, the "crosses" could be number lines. There are 3 marks on them. Each had 3 dots in the center.

The constellation? Could be a representation of the the Frist 3 prime numbers. 2 dots, 3 dots, and together, 5 dots.

The three dot symbol could be the companion to it.

Anyone find it interesting that they use two insects: one with the longest lifespan, and the other with the shortest?

Let's sum everything up again:

There is this a long black object on both sides of first 3 pages (and in the up left corner of OP's pic).

We assume its orthodox cross. Poorly drawn.

Let's stick to that assumption for a moment:

Orthodox cross "is a variation of the Christian cross, commonly found in Eastern Orthodox Churches, as well as the Eastern Catholic Churches of Byzantine rite and the Society for Eastern Rite Anglicanism." (Wikipedia)

>Eastern

may be a clue

- bbut what if it's not suposed to be a cross at all? Maybe it's a postmark, or even a map?

There is a mayfly
 Mayflies often symbolize something ephemeral
 Maybe it's a hint at ephemeral cryptographic key?
 I also considered it as a hint at ephemerides in astronavigation (<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ephemeris>) but it's a long shot.

THE DOTS

There is a combination of 5 dots on page 7
 3 dots forming a horizontal line on page 39
 Same combination as on page 7, on the border of drawing on page 22
 Same combination as on page 7, but fipped vertically on page 23
 Same combination as on page 7, but fipped horziontally on page 56

What does it tell us?
 - The combination of dots isn't random
 - may be somehow important

The assumption is that dots represent stars
 If those supposed to be Pleiades, why there are only 5 dots, not 7?
 Why the drawing is flipped on pages 23 and 56?
 What does it even mean? Is it a hint at certain place or time?

What are those "stars" we found in the drawing of 2 connected mayflies?
 Does it mean anything?

I was tired of dots and stars so I decided to focus on something else.

I found this page: <http://it.stlawu.edu/~dmelvill/mesomath/Bignumns.html> about babilonian numeral system

Cuneiform means just: 1033 3301

$17 \cdot 60 + 13 = 1033$
 $55 \cdot 60 + 1 = 3301$

BTW. See how everything is about flipping objects?
 Makes sense now.

From my first observation most of these symbols symbolized life like that mayfly which lives only to fuck and dyes, to that plant looking thingy young bearing fruit and dying. And those dots seem like star system of pleydes (supposedly life came from there) to infinity symbols (supposedly life is infinite). I might be wrong, but I get this kind of idea. By the way, who the hell picked the name for op's image, and did op himself collected those pictures? With the name of image in mind I get the idea that this picture symbolizes that life is from one source and that source is infinite. Cute cicadafags.

clarification, it was a separate ARG. But I didn't check it twice and so, it ended up to the point where if you got all the steps right, you wouldn't be able to solve it, because one step's cipher was off by 1 or something. I was basing it off a purely theoretical fibonacci-based numeral system and did not account for some little detail.

The goal of the ARG has long since faded into something else.

Well there is a combination of 5 dots on page 7, 23, and 56 of onion 7. We thought it means something, but we didn't know what. The graph is of Euler's totient function for numbers 0-1000. It shows the amount of relatively prime number for every natural number in this range. I thought that maybe if I'll match this combination of dots from onion 7 to this chart I'll get numbers, that are somehow significant to the encryption. But it's harder than I thought. I think this chart is maybe not so very precise, we don't know what chart Cicada used and how precise they were (assuming this is it) It's also possible that the dot's were just reference without any precise meaning or they mean something else.

Besides I've checked, and I can't see any equilateral triangle and any right triangle where the length of one leg is half the length of the other, so I can't see how these dots would show the golden ratio.

The intriguing part still being the three dots in a row. There on the right side, this is way too suspect since these code breaking moments are turning out to be coming from a graphical span, and then mathematical since the beginning. I really believe that even if my idea is stupid, it should worth the try anyway, so following the first picture of cicada ever, first things first. The three dots reminds a lot of those seen on 3D imagery, those dots could be positioned there to suggest you to double that right half, with the root systems. For my shame, I got myself cockeyed in there for a while but I didn't saw anything new at it, obviously just doubled roots. Let's see from the raw way, aren't these symbols speaking of life and death and its subtle spiritual facts? The cycle keeps going while plants grow, while insects live and die and even men and stars and planets orbits around. Above the dots, I just see a moth wing there with its nerves. Dots are practically falling from every symbol being the mayfly on center-left, the main one. It is mainly composed of smaller dots... my guts says that this is the core of this puzzle. It will obviously span into hundred of numbering...

Is there any graphical engine capable of detecting how many dots are there? Some plugin for paint.net or something?

I think the dots are star constellations, on the right 'Orion' and on the left 'The Plough' from the 'Ursa Major' constellation but with one star missing, 'Alioth' which happens to be the brightest star in Ursa Major. Interestingly enough the Babylonians were among the first to discover these constellations.

What if the pic itself is the next onion site? Ursa Major is also referred to as Epsilon Ursae Majoris and epsilon is the Greek symbol for the letter E. As stated above the missing star is also the brightest star so i looked at the brightest star in Orion which led me to Rigel AKA Beta Ori and Beta being the Greek symbol for B (or V in modern times)

It seems a little to easy and not consistent with the typical MO for 3301 puzzles but you never know.

Maybe I'm going out on a limb here but the 2 mayflies connected end to end remind me of double dagger first used by the Ancient Greek scholars as critical marks in manuscripts. The 3 dots remind me of ellipsis or possibly a colloquial. I see a lot of life and death symbolism in this. The orthodox cross, one is slanted to the left the other is slanted to the right. It is sometimes seen as the cross over the crescent. The cluster of dots to the bottom left reminds me of the seven sisters constellation (Pleiades) witch is near the moon. I'm sure you guys have already gotten to this but I figured I would just throw it out there. That all I have for now.

It's instructions for how to solve the cryptogram. The human symbol tells you orientation as in which way to look at the code. So I guess the image should be rotated. The cross things are sign posts, like 880 km to Amsterdam, 651 km to Paris, that sort of thing but they are oriented to tell you direction of travel. In one direction the bug is cut in half along the axis of symmetry into just the wing. In the other direction it's stretched out and then mirrored about itself. Then it is pictographically "flattened" into just a network of lines and curves, then curves and lines separated from each other, maybe referring to even odd rows? Anyway I think it's a set of transformations to make on the code, cut in half, mirror, flatten, split. But I don't remember my linear algebra enough to say if they are associative or can be done in any order.

The bold black crosses could be a fence and a street sign post, the lying down man almost looks like his eyes are open so he could be laying down or maybe if rearranged standing up. the bugs minimized to be in the back ground and plants apart of his farm and he is looking at constellations in the sky. <-- far fetched I know.

Anyone notice there seems to be markings on the man leg right above his knee, also on directly below his pectoral muscle, also it looks like he is looking at the picture in the upper right hand corner. If you look at that wing looking thing as if it is 3-D it looks like a rock, or a flint knife.

Also some things are blurry and pixelated so maybe you are supposed to look at the whole thing from a 3d perspective and somethings are in the foreground and some are in the background.

In the Bible, the Pleiades are mentioned as כימה ("Khima") three times, always in conjunction with Orion—Amos 5:8; Job 9:9; and Job 38:31. The first two verses are references about their creation, but the third (taken in the context of the following verses) may be more about their ongoing appearance in the night sky. In Job 38:31, the Lord is speaking directly to Job and challenges him, asking if he can bind the chains of the Pleiades—the implication being that Job cannot, but the Lord can. Talmud (Bavli, Berakhot, 58b) says that it has about 100 stars, understanding the word כימה as כמאה ke' me-ah, "about one hundred" in Hebrew.

They are known as kimah in Jewish culture.

At the instant considering the right most.
It is the flow of life. How your parents bring you in this world. You are the two halves of them. It's about how they add up to your jeevan shakti with their entire them.
Then you meet other influences like tributaries of a river. Then you start depositing what you gathered earlier making things easy. Reaching the maxima of flow. You tend to generate sustained oscillations which ironically die out and so will be your case eventually. Realising this fact that only quantized entities exist forever and you are an accumulation of that hence tending towards continuum collision is bound to take place and you will radiate out and take up some other form which is just a reset and you will have to start afresh. Thus you never reach the cause of oscillation which was also your destination. Ultimately you do what your parents did you give best out of you, your children. But I am confused. Lifetime the confusion is gone. Two streams leading to better two streams can be approximated to be a kind of quantization. Hence the race has fairly large lifetime unless externally excited.

The dots are the Pleiades and Orion's belt of course, they are both a sign of something, and the major dots in the Pleiades constellation are the five dots in the picture while the three dots are exactly the belt. There is definitely a connection between the mayflies and the moth, and mostly agree with other things on here. Still sure this is a way of saying a message using pictures (duh). So try using words and read.

1. The hieroglyphs are Sumerian numbers first line: 10 7 10 3 or 17 13 or 1713 the gematry meaning of this number is 'Puzzle is Coming'. The second line the number is 5 5 1 or 551, and the meaning is 'Illuminati'.

2. I think that the dots are combination of dice numbers and morse alphabet:

five dots represents number 221, the hematry meaning of this number may be '666 is Elohim'. also the three dots in the morses alphabet represents S (Satan ?).

P.S I use the Jewish gematry, because it is close to Caballa.
