This introduction to Cryptograpgy, mentions: "The Tale of Lludd and Llevelys" in The Mabinogion on first page.
http://www.maths.qmul.ac.uk/~raw/MAS335/cn1.pdf

When Lludd told his brother the purpose of his errand Llevelys said that he already knew why Lludd had come. Then they sought some different way to discuss the problem, so that the wind would not carry it off and the Corannyeid learn of their conversation. Llevelys ordered a long horn of bronze to be made, and they spoke through that, but whatever one said to the other came out as hateful and contrary. When Llevelys perceived there was a devil frustrating them and causing trouble he ordered wine to be poured through the horn to wash it out, and the power of the wine drove the devil out"

A cypherpunk is any activist advocating widespread use of strong cryptography as a route to social and political change. Originally communicating through the Cypherpunks electronic mailing list, informal groups aimed to achieve privacy and security through proactive use of cryptography.

If I understand it right they want us to set up a server which allows executable scripts to be uploaded... essentially backdooring - more like frontdooring - our system. And they didn't specify a interpreter for the CGI either. So what the hell do they want with the service? Or did I get it wrong and they just want a service _capable_ of executing CGI scripts?

>mfw attemtps cicada and doesn't understand cgi

cgi is just the standard that defines how a web server interacts with scripts. lrn2wikipedia they want you to write a script to accept uploads from them. just like /x/ has a cgi script to accept image uploads of gifs. example: this picture of my reaction to reading your question (pic related).

theyre not saying to execute anything they upload.

id suggest you might want to at least read internetting 4 dummies before attempting cicada.

if this is real, then anyone trying to solve is in way over their heads. and honestly, i've thought that from day one. or at least year 1.

i mean, sure you've got all the mysticism, crypto, technology, etc. but i think it all comes together into something more than just those things. like, it they're trying to seem like a new religion or something. technomysticism maybe? but behind that, there's something else.

maybe it's applebaum, assange, and the old cipherpunks like everyone says... but i think it's more likely to be the global banker elite. think about it: they know the world is changing. bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies will put them out of business one day. so what better way to combat it than to be in charge of the new system? "create what you fear most" as cicada says.

You are both close, but missing it. Cicada isn't a cult. It isn't a government, it isn't banks. It isn't all of Satoshi Nakamoto. (although members are undoubtedly involved in each of these areas).

Cicada is fundamentally about evolution of man. About taking us to the next step. Not the next biological step (although that's part of it too). It's more than that. It's about man overcoming humanity. Digging deep inside to find infinity. Realizing all out limitations, weakness, and suffering are our own creations.

We live in a Matrix-like world and they're here to pull out the few who see past it, and then guide them further down the path. Except our matrix isn't a computer program built by machines. Our matrix is the belief that we even exist in the first place. Our egos built our matrixes. But we can't see it because our egos have convinced us that they ARE us.

The Cicada revolution occurs on every level: physical, subconscious, emotional, mental, social, technical, and on.

Those who find their way to the enlightenment offered are those who will change the world of, not just tomorrow, but the world of today.

Notice they say "being" and "intelligence" instead of "person," "man," or "human"? That's because they don't even consider themselves human any more. They are past it. They are the übermensch. Not because they have overtaken humanity (although they have). They have overcome themselves.

1033 is a common programming number used in unsigned bit integers.

take a close look at net protocols that use 1033 to call upon specific functions and classes e.g. microsoft, google, facebook, twitter etc...

this will lead you to the next unsigned bit integer the impossible 1024 which it's max value is 1023 other wise known as 10 bits.

10bit is the handle of the programmer behind most current infrastructures from banks to military satcoms, to closed network systems.

come on /x/ stop relying on google and wikipedia and start using your damn brains for once.

That's like saying that because Cicada had only used art by Blake that they couldn't use art by Goya or Waterhouse.

According to wiki:

>The program is notable for being the first steganography tool (version 1.01 released on December 2004) that:
lets users hide data in more than a single carrier file. When hidden data are split among a set of carrier files you get a carrier chain, with no enforced hidden data theoretical size limit (256MB, 512MB, ... depending only on the implementation) implements 3 layers of hidden data obfuscation (cryptography, whitening and encoding) extends deniable cryptography into deniable steganography

That sounds exactly like something Cicada would like, and use.

So what are the 3 most obvious passwords? The first two are super obvious. Not sure on a third.

1. 3301
2. 1033

The philosophy they provided has inspired me to change something and become the best I can and even better. Reading up on last years puzzle and doing this years was like the ingnition spark.

I'd love to know more about them or follow them/learn from them and even change the world.

-- You can't change the world no matter the amount of brainwashing or drugs you take to convince yourself that the reality is what you imagine it to be.
Just because you can convince yourself of your own delusions, your individual delusions will not change the actual consensus reality that we collectively experience.

Thusfar cicada3301 2014 has just been a practice in setting up, using and applying a bunch of encryption software on a bunch of files delivering some old and esoteric mumbo jumbo. Maybe some people learned something while doing it. Maybe some became delusional. Maybe some gained nothing.

To me it has been largely a waste of time.
